(2.)

A Pansy bold and a Marguerite
 Tucked in a bed close by
 Turned their heads in the gentle breeze
 And heard the Daisy sigh.
 "Daisy is plain," the bold Pansy cried,
 "Like you her charms are few ;"
 "No! dear Pansy," said Marguerite,
 "I am as sweet as you."

Chorus—

I am but a Flower,
 Just the same as you ;
 I am just as sweet, dear,
 And my heart as true.
 I enjoy the sunshine
 . . . And the morning dew ;
 I am loved and cared for
 Just the same as you.

(3.)

A Rose remarked to a Marigold,
 "I am endowed with grace ;
 In this garden so gay and bright
 I hold the pride of place."
 "Yes! You are sweet, as ev'ryone knows,
 But with my golden hue
 I am pretty," said Marigold,
 "And just as sweet as you."

Chorus.

A Lily pure in her robe of white,
 Queen of that garden fair,
 Told them all of a world of Love
 Where there were Gardens rare.
 "Dear little Flowers, don't disagree,
 Purity, Hope, and Love
 Need no colours to claim us all
 Sweet unto Him above."

Chorus.
